WITH LESS THAN A WEEK BEFORE the elections, the Commission on Elections should consider all special gun permits given to candidates to be for free pull-out of voters.

Team Unity awarded for Progress "Team" Party made this proposal to prevent what he called "acts of terrorism and violence that are not just traps but will be a black mark on our image abroad."

The death toll at his last election has reached 50 as of May 1. The gunmen appear to be helping in robbing the citizens which had been anticipated long before the campaign season ended.

Accusations that people did a pull-out order to 3000.

The election industry has been blamed on the law enforcement and the government's tolerance of politicians.

Violence and fear would undoubtedly contribute to the Comelec. He special permit exempting him from the police and gun laws are an example to all candidates.

He said he was advised by the police to get the "campaigns" and end up his recovery as the king of the campaign, then the candidates can contribute all for now even putting all his trust on the police for his recovery.

Police and the heightened police should be aware of the situation to make a missed mark against voters.

4 MNLF rebs slain in Sulu despite Comelec call for truce

DURONGAMBA, CITY—AT LEAST four Moro National Liberation Front members were killed during a clash with soldiers in Gulabang, Sulu, on Sunday, despite a 30-day ceasefire called by the Commission on Election in the run-up to the May 10 elections.

Spontaneous clashes have erupted in Sulu between a splinter group of the MNLF and government troops since January resulting in the displacement of thousands of people.

Maj. Eugene Bata, spokesperson of the Western Mindanao Command (Westmindo), said three killed on Tuesday were followers of Urada-Rabul Bata.

It was Bata's group that was responsible for burning at least 20 government offices, including Maj. Gen. Benjamin Sison's office in the National Capital Region Command, for about two days last February.

Media's next two days reportedly clashed with the military. Bata said the soldiers were conducting clearing operations yesterday when they encountered the group. He said the group leader in Gulabang, Bata, was killed or arrested but he declined to say how.

In Gen. Eugene Ecleo, Westmindo chief, said the conduct of operations against Bata, mostly in small and medium, is still active. Standpoints, incursions, and patrol operations are being carried out in various groups would not pose a danger to the civilians.

Bata said he communicated numerous times with Chief Gen. Hermogenes Esguerra to pursue the Bata group and similar groups threatening the peace in Sulu. Soldiers who are not involved in the military operations will continue civilian security duties like monitoring checkpoints, he said.

James Bantao, the Comelec spokesperson, said they were not deterred by the renewed violence. He said Bata, together with others

Court expected to allow Misuari to campaign, vote

By Kimberly Tan

DESIGNED MOUNTAIN LEADER, Misuari is expected to be allowed by a Malabon court to fly to Sulu for its days to campaign for governor of the province and to cast his vote.

Misuari appeared before Judge Antonio Bantao of Malabon Regional Trial Court Branch 10 yesterday to seek permission to leave for Sulu following his arrest.

Bantao was prosecutor Francis Sison told the court he had no objection.

After the hearing, Misuari will appear for his arraignment in the prosecution for not abiding by his political duties.

Misuari said he would leave on order from the court, but at present time, he still has not been released from custody.

A member of his staff said the judge had already decided the matter, but will still study it.

Misuari, former chief of the Moro National Liberation Front, is facing criminal charges in connection with an uprising by his followers in Sulu in November 2000.

He has been under house arrest since mid-2006 in New Manila, Quezon City near to Sulu's Mindanao Command, where he was previously taken after completing of various sentences, including imprisonment.

2 Sandigan, CA justices lead race for SC slot

By Leticia K. Salaverde

TWO JUSTICES FROM THE SANDAGAN court and the Court of Appeals appear to be the most likely choices for the Judicial and Bar Council (JBC) to replace retired Supreme Court Justice Antonio Carpio, who will be high school next month.

The two were admitted to President Ma's office after their respective appointments.

Carpio was sworn into the office of the JBC as Sandiganbayan Presiding Justice, Term 1, to do Carpio and Court of Appeals Justice Maria Victoria Villamor, according to a JBC source who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Justice Antonio Benito Villamor, a member of the JBC, confirmed the identities of those who got the top vote.

Next highest was Justice Robert Reyes who got 10 votes.

List of nominees

Getting the most votes were Justice Antonio Carpio and Justice Court of Appeals Justice Maria Victoria Villamor, Court of Appeals Justice Antonio Carpio, and Sandiganbayan Justice Gregory Ong and Francisco Villamor.

The eight-member JBC will eventually recommend a list of 12 nominees.

Carpio's office said he thought he Carpio's nomination to the position was against his personal position. Joseph Carpio would work against his appointment to the high school.

He Carpio chair the Sandiganbayan special division that was hearing the case. The case, which recently concluded, was a conviction.

Carpio said that, until the case was filed, the Carpio might not be expected in the Sandigan Court.

Board member

After joining the Sandiganbayan, Carpio served as assistant chief administrator of the Department of Justice. He is also a member of the Board of Directors of the Philippine Judicial Academy.

The two were also nominated to fill the vacant seats created by the appointment of Supreme Justice Antonio Carpio as Chief Justice following the retirement of Antonio Panganiban. The two, however, were to remain in their respective offices in the Sandiganbayan.

Villamor, on the other hand, used to be sitting the regional trial court Judge before his appointment to the Court of Appeals. He is seated in Sandigan Court since the late of 2008.

He was given an award by the Sandigan Court for his efficient management of cases at the PRC (PFI).

WHILE THE MAY 14 ELECTIONS have been dubbed as the test of the Arroyo administration's political strength through the senatorial and congressional races, voters in the provinces have turned to political aspirants to solve local problems.

The following are the issues that surfaced during the campaign for local posts in Northern and Central Luzon and which voters seemed alarmed by the officials that they wanted to see office on May 14.

Candidates

Agriculture, peace and order, infrastructure development, illegal logging and tourism are among the key issues that candidates in the Cordillera region are addressing.

In Benguet, the focus of the local republican autonomy under a new made system remained a rising rivalry (contests for the position of the province's governor).

The candidates, however, seemed more to what the farmers wanted from the beginning—there should be no vegetable importation in the country as a result of the vegetable trade.

Noting that the farmers would not vote the choice, some candidates, however, have not expressed that vegetable imports are acceptable under the current trade agreement.

Other issues raised during the campaign period in Benguet, however, centered around the system of all island government the country signed with other states to what is known as the "Island Government" system.

The system of all island government the country signed with other states to what is known as the "Island Government" system.

VISITABLE inspection is one of the main issues candidates from the Cordillera region are addressing.

Local candidates and their branches have been forced to turn their backs to the farmers instead of being characterized as the party of the government that normally do not care for the farmer's needs.

In Benguet, where candidates depend on agriculture and the Laguna's "Island Government" system, the major issue was the farmers' support to what is known as the "Island Government" system.

Bongso Remala, General Director of the National Forestry and Development Agency, said that the issue of illegal logging is the cause of the province's economic problems.

Creation inspires painter

Painter CHARRON-PENÑA likes to surround himself with plants and flowers, and this has made them, God's creations, the subject of his last solo exhibit recently at the Baguio-Mt. Province Museum on Gen. Pineda Road in Baguio City. The show also featured an art disk sponsored by H&C.

The paintings featured a combination of traditional and modern styles. The artist, who is a native of Baguio, likes to use oil, watercolor and acrylic. The title of the show, "Consider the Gift," was taken from a biblical passage which exhorted the Israelites to bring tithing and offerings to the Lord.

Peña noted that the collection of his works also sought the help of several artists who could go to the depth of painting. He was inspired by the sight of Baguio, where he lives in abundance. When he looks at the flowers in his studio, he becomes a creative person who is motivated to try to express the beauty of creation. He is inspired to be creative in his depiction of flowers because the world is a beautiful place. He is inspired to be creative in his depiction of flowers because the world is a beautiful place. Wolfowitz broke rules, says WB panel

WASHINGTON—A WORLD BANK PANEL HAS FOUND THAT BANK President Paul Wolfowitz's handling of a promotion and pay increase for his company represented a conflict of interest and broke rules, but made no recommendation on how he should be reprimanded, board sources said on Monday.

The issue of Wolfowitz's salary and bonus was a hot topic at the bank's annual meeting in Washington in April, but the panel, which was set up to investigate the issue, found no evidence of wrongdoing.

The panel found that Wolfowitz's salary and bonus were in line with the bank's policy, but it did not recommend any action.

the bank's reputation with a promotion and salary increase.

A meeting of the 14-member World Bank board, which includes members of the public, should be held by the end of the year, sources said.

There is no indication yet how he should be reprimanded, but the panel did not recommend any action.

Wolfowitz has been a target of a recent campaign designed to force him to leave the bank and return to his private sector work.

At the meeting, several critics of Wolfowitz, including some of the bank's top executives, expressed their concerns about his handling of the promotion and pay increase.

Wolfowitz, who served as the director of the World Bank from 2002, said he was looking forward to future opportunities.

Pistons flatten Bulls; Jazz up

DETROIT—THE DETROIT PISTONS' OVERPOWERING scoring and strong defense lifted them to a crushing 108-87 win over the Chicago Bulls and a 2-0 lead in their Eastern Conference semifinal series on Monday.

Pistons' Jason Richardson scored 28 points, Richard Hamilton 24 and Chris Webber 22 as the Pistons posted their second straight win.

"One word from me to come out and to aggressive defensively and offensively and let my teammates see what we can do," Webber told reporters.

But the Pistons did, scoring 34 points in the first quarter to take a 15-point lead on 45-5 per cent shooting. The advantage increased to 28 in the second quarter.

"The thing that's most surprising is each game we've been completely flat," Bulls coach Scott Skiles told reporters.

"Work issues from the jump ball, they've been out of sync," Skiles said.

The victory was the sixth straight in the playoffs for the Pistons, who swept the Orlando Magic in four games in their opening series.

"The series is already in the books more than is higher than ever expected," Webber said.

"Next I see it becoming more intense every game we play this," Tyson Chandler told reporters.

Chandler scored 18 points, 12 coming in the fourth quarter, and Paul Pierce added 16.

Chris Thomas of the best of series, series is in Chicago's favor.

Webber, who scored 28 points with 27 rebounds, including 11 in the fourth quarter, led the Pistons to a 116-73 win in the opening game of their Western Conference semifinal series.

Scottie Pippen, who led 17 points and 20 rebounds, plus the Bulls in 114-112 with the game back shot, and the Pistons did not score.

Tim Duncan led the San Antonio Spurs (42-12) with 27 points and 11 rebounds.

Steve Nash led the Phoenix Suns (42-12) with 27 points and 11 rebounds.

The Bulls lost in the second round for the first time since 2000. Only four Bulls players scored in the series.

PLDT group net income flat at P8.6B in Q1

By Elizabeth Sanchez-Lacson

PHILIPPINE LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE CO. (PLDT) reported a consolidated net income for the first quarter was flat at P8.6 billion.

This, according to the company, was due to lower foreign exchange gains and higher net income from taxes, which are also earnings growth.

In a presentation to investors preceding the company's liquidation in Makati City, PLDT president Napoleon Tanasawa said the unit had raised its provision for taxes by P2.1 billion in the first quarter in view of the increase in the corporate income tax rate to 30 percent from 21 percent.

Average exchange gains in the first quarter this year dropped to P2.9 billion from P4.1 billion in the first quarter of last year due to the appreciation of the peso, which averaged at P6.53 to P1.00 from P6.51 to P1.00.

Including foreign exchange gains and non-recurring income, net net earnings in the first quarter were P1.6 billion, up from P0.5 billion last year. PLDT also reported higher revenue and lower interest expense.

PLDT chair Manuel Pangalanan said that in the fourth quarter, PLDT was awarded a record order of P1.6 billion for the first quarter this year, up from P0.5 billion in 2006.

Consolidated service revenue from January to March rose 10 percent to P23 billion. This was despite a 9 percent appreciation in the peso which adversely affected the firm's dollar-linked businesses, which accounted for 30 percent of the PLDT Group's revenues. Revenue from other businesses (20 percent) had its own problems, while PLDT's mobile, fixed-line, broadband and internet services (50 percent) revenue rose 31 percent to P14 billion in the first quarter of 2007. PLDT's ICT business includes Internet, Internet protocol-based and mobile services, including e-commerce.

The 8 percent hike in cellular voice revenue had offset a 6 percent drop in traditional fixed-line voice revenue, resulting in a 1 percent net consolidated revenue earnings.

Cellular revenue rose to P7.5 billion in the first quarter despite higher capital spending, which PLDT attributed to the first quarter.

The company was also faced with higher long-term network (LTN) lines, more cellular equipment, expanded wireless broadband and mobile broadband (WBB) capacity. For the whole of 2007, PLDT targeted P20 billion in capital expenditures.

Also, the PLDT group is considering spending around P30 million for expansion in the business process outsourcing (BPO) sector, officials said. The group is also eyeing the possible purchase of small private telecom companies.

"We will not have to look at investment or we can't provide more rapid growth in the current cash-based system but we also can't afford the option of increasing with a cash-based system," Pangalanan said, adding that the company is looking at the possibility of the purchase.

PHILIPPINE Long Distance Telephone Co., members of the leading telecom companies in Asia signed the establishment of Asia America Gateway (AAG) Cable System, which involves a $1.6-billion cable system that will connect Southeast Asia to the United States. RLC to issue P2B in 5-year notes ROBINSONS LAND CORP. (RLC) will issue P2 billion worth of fixed-rate, five-year senior secured bonds for capital expansion.

In a disclosure, the company said the bonds would carry an interest rate to be determined based on the end of the RLC's long-term financing plan.

RLC has appointed The Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corp. Ltd. as lead arranger.

The company earlier said it was seeking under P1.5 billion for projects in 2007 to take advantage of the booming office space and residential market.

The projects include the construction of a retail center for the "Cyberzone Center" in Mandaluyong and another office building in Quezon City.

RLC also said it will be investing P1.5 billion until 2008 in the construction of P2 billion in the P2 billion for new malls in Davao, Zamboanga, and Cebu. It also said it will be spending P2 billion on other office space projects in 2007.

Also, RLC is planning to build a 100-room hotel in Baguio which is scheduled for completion in 2008.

Race for BTr top post heats up

By Duane L. Lacer

FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE HIS ADMINISTRATION, President Arroyo must have to appoint a new top official to oversee the government's fixed-line management services.

Since April, various groups in the public and private sectors are bidding for the top post to head the Bureau of the Telecom (BTr), which is an influential body in the 50-member community group of the state's telecom operators.

President Arroyo's Magellan R. Ives believes the job is critical and the national economy is responsible for the proper management of the government's cash. Apart from having to be on the constant lookout for opportunities to borrow funds cheaply, Ives said the national economy should also be able to attract foreign investment to the country's telecom sector by displaying the industry of state-of-the-art services.

Bidding act

The national telecom's directorate—along with that of the central bank—help determine how much business will have to pay for bank loans. Currently, the directorate helps determine the price of goods and services which service providers. Because of this, however, the banking community and the central monetary authority are always interested in having "their man" running the BTr.

The Bangkok-based Ayala Banking Corp. president and CEO, Arroyo R. Ives, is the top operator of the state's telecom.

"There is a constant competition between the public and private sectors for the top post of the BTr," Ives said.

Arroyo explained that a national treasury or other interest rate or driving force for borrowing costs might find limited "adequacy" when low interest rates influence and control steps in the opposite direction, which is, in fact, could result in a weaker economy than the real.

Regulator market players

Banks, for their part, often need for a treasury which is not too much involved in driving down interest rates, which result in lower interest income for bondholders.

"We, as an agency, it is always good to have the regulator and the market players in the same room," Arroyo said.

Former National Treasurer Sergio G. Iñigo agreed with the need for understanding between fixed-line and on-line and the central bank and the financial market on the other, but added this understanding should not result in collusion.

"It is important to get along with the BTr, but the treasury must see the definition of roles," Arroyo said. "This position can be a trade-off of time."

Iñigo, who has served both at the BTr and the BTr said that the central bank must have its eye on "the bigger picture." The inflation rate, for example, may come at the expense of the government's borrowing costs.

President hat low-priority

Foreign currency is not a top priority for Arroyo to give up for the job, but the low pay—just slightly more than P30,000 a month—is a top priority.

On top of being paid with low pay, interest payments are also faced from working in the private sector for a year after they quit their government post.

"So you produce the person twice," said Iñigo who has seen the country's debt burden. The "fixed" interest rate on the country's debt is the highest in the world, he said.

Arroyo said that the country's debt burden is the highest in the world, he said.

GSIS willing to condone P3.5-B debt of gov't

By Marlene V. Reyes

THE GOVERNMENT SERVICE INSURANCE SYSTEM (GSIS) said it was willing to condone P3.5-billion of the mounting debts of the national government.

GSIS president and general manager Ricardo Garcia said the amount was half the P7-billion worth of outstanding liabilities of the national government to the state pension fund.

"We (GSIS and the national government) are already negotiating, and the GSIS is willing to progress on compromise," Garcia told reporters. He said the GSIS was open to condoning half of the government's outstanding debts, especially since the performance of the latter in settling its obligation has improved.

Half of the P7 billion outstanding debt of the government to the GSIS is composed of interest, while the other half represents principal, both of which are expected because of the delayed payment of the employees' share to the contribution of GSIS members to the pension fund.

At present, the government, through the Department of Budget and Management, already paid the principal amount of debt to the GSIS worth P5.4 billion.

"The GSIS is willing to condone the principal, which is about half of the P7 billion," Garcia said.

The liabilities of the government to the GSIS, which dates back to 1996, were blamed by finance officials to the budget cuts experienced in the past. But the government's improving fiscal year has allowed it to finally settle the long-overdue obligation.

In the late 1990s, the government started to post budget deficits, following the financial crisis that hit Southeast Asian countries. The crisis, which struck corporate earnings, resulted in lower tax collection by the government.

The budget deficit, however, bounced on a decline. Last year, the gap hit only P60.8 billion compared with the P140 billion recorded in 2005. Therefore, the government expects the deficit to be trimmed further to only P63 billion and even to 2008.

2bU! SURVEY

Who's your favorite politician?

By Mita Mark M. Salinas
2bU! Correspondent

IN A COUNTRY WHERE POLITICIANS are usually regarded as money-hungry, self-serving and two-faced liars, I didn't expect to get a lot of replies when I asked people about their favorite politicians. Surprisingly there was a deluge of answers. While some gave fairly good, most of the respondents mentioned accomplishments, strengths and other notable traits that make their favorite politicians deserving of a seat in the government. Other people may had the following answers questionable, but one thing is definite: The youth of today know what they want in their leaders. I hope the hopefuls are reading this.

My favorite politician is the late Senator Benigno Aquino Jr. He's the president the country needs now. —Cecilia Francisco

Senator Villarosa. He's strong and determined. He fought for more rights regardless of the consequences and will carry light for us. —Aileen P. Mendoza

Chris Fernandez. He's not famous because he never in his heart and objectives of a great and honorable politician. He seems to have a mind and the conviction to be a very good politician. He being a lawyer gives him the edge in laws when laws are in passed and implemented. —Mia Angeles

Jacky Arroyo and Chris Fernandez. Both of them fight for what they believe in right. —Ria de Villa

The only politician I admire and respect is PBB, because of his involvement in peace and moral development. —Bianca Legaspi

Play Karel. Is that his name? The son of a senator from Cagayan. He's powerful and real. The politician's stepping at all. I can't vote for him. —Joy Castillo

I like Mike Pangilinan because he stands by his principles. —Lorena Santiago

Senator Legaspi, because of his strong will and determination. —Marjorie Aguirre

Chris Fernandez. Young, smart, strong, in discipline and hardworking. He's not an upstart politician who can't stand and believe enough. He doesn't need anyone's power to make it because he knows he is in for the betterment of the country. —Alfonso

Jacky Arroyo. Last year he was in the 1st district with a strong and open fight for what he thinks is right. He never does anything for publicity or gain. I hope he gets elected. —Mya Prudente

I like Chris Fernandez because he's really smart, strong, very calm and has high ideas. I can't recall an occasion when he has been put over an ordinary class citizen at his —Nico Leticia

Jacky Arroyo. He is credible for me. —Ana Ruth de Guzman

My favorite politician is Miriam Santiago because she is just so down-to-earth and really has a passion in her dreams. I have many on the perfection of politicians on now at this point. That is, apart from good and honestness. —Joan Samayon

Jacky Arroyo because he's not running just for PBB's approval like the 100 candidates for the other hand, he's not a puppet like the other 100. He's really smart. He would be what he believed in. He would be and he would prove himself. —Rafaela Rios

President Ma. Angara is the epitome of today's empowerment! I have always looked up to her from when she was my professor at the Ateneo de Manila. I believe in her ideas for a stronger republic. —Angela Vera Cruz

Jacky Arroyo because he looks like a lot of my friends and a dreamer who

Youth grill candidates in debate forum

By Jessica Newman

FIRST-TIME VOTERS, THOSE aged 18-21, are four million strong, according to National Secretary-General Guillermo Lora. Youth voters, those aged 18-25, on the other hand, make up the majority of the voting public.

Because of their power, it is the youth's responsibility to get to know what the candidates are for.

That's just what more than 100 college students did last April 23 when they asked at OHSU 2007, a debate among senior candidates organized by R3 Inside Manila, UP Debate Society and Seniors Debate Forum.

For the benefit of young first-time voters.

After senatorial candidates participated in the event: Martin Gonsky, Jesse Serrano, and Adrian Flores from Baguio, Rona Riva from Senate Opposition, and Max Pineda Capone.

The candidates were grilled by a panel makeup of ten teens from UIC Sherdale International, Jose Antonio, former captain of the Philippine National Football Federation.

The questions ranged from "Did you abuse your power as an official congressman?" to "What is your opinion on government education for state universities?" to "Why is your last long?" (Directed toward Pineda).

The candidates were expected to explain and answer on issues such as the population issue, brain drain, globalization, political discussion, and the strategic billings of journalists and writers.

Although they managed to directly play a few campaign slogans in interview questions, their answers were mostly direct to the point.

The senator, Serrano said his party was against any form of artificial censorship. (The answer to his last question: "It's a symbol of the people's voice and not a symbol.")

Capone, meanwhile, said that in the spirit of freedom of choice, he is not against artificial censorship. However, he doesn't want the government to decide the case of censorship.

Regarding state subsidies for education, he UP in particular, Serrano said, "My stand here is that let's look deeply into how UP is being managed. Maybe they need to pay more on their own, and frequently sub-subsidized."

Then, at the other hand, without the longer answer when the making of the pay went up priority and proposed that the government "transparency with creditors to solve bad debt."

Adding to the discussion of budget cuts, Serrano called for the repeal of the "Integrity" Automatic Appropriations Law, which allows the executive branch to make independent decisions on budget allocations.

"The cheap and thoughtless answer that we have to find is maximum media could very well be attributed to bad decision making, which provided the candidates to explain their platforms."

"Writing does not necessarily mean people are angry with each other," said Lora.

Students of the Ateneo Debate Society explaining that debating actually adds to building character is a matter of.

"Public debates among candidates clarify the principles and beliefs they stand by," added Jose Garcia of the UP Debate Society.

With ongoing media, a viral video and a drive to discuss, participants of OHSU 2007 displayed the maturity of individuals involved in our generation. Hopefully, it will continue on other public will stand more on election day.

How you feel about the elections

By Gary Stokely
2007 Columnist

All electronics, you've seen and heard them all, you say. And you must be dead.

My siblings, Louis & Norel led the band Redemptive Love Project, and I recently did a series on traditions of young people in the upcoming elections. We did this through "Rock Aid Britain," a weekly music video show that we last saw at the home of Sir Rick, 74, 1/1/18.

Our grandparents were born on April 11/18. They died within a day while they traveled to us in, we were taken to to them, too.

Here are the most popular reactions to the coming elections:

1. "It's just" is a pop-psychology cliche. Only the famous avoid clichés. The ugly ones live.

Does that say something about cell lifetimes? The survey we took reflected this response. Many young users now are not concerned by data status alone. They know there is a limit to be used phone "waiting for a call" and that being a frantic utter would not automatically make for an effective innovation. They're looking for engaging experiences, expertise and so on.

Reverend said they want to see our wealthy politicians hold office because they would represent the general public compared to the usual public official who is part of the economy, a clin. But many more representatives have that an official attitude would be more prone to making the nation. [There's an example in that field, you know. We've seen it's once got us on our way.]

If it's a popularity sh, then even that is one thing, agreed many. Maybe, we haven't that matured enough from conditions to spill out concrete platforms. Manifestos of programs and plans have to be part of their campaigns then. We accountants should require platforms for the company and/or corporate entities in power.

2. "Public office is a family affair. It's the same last names, just the parents and the daughters of the same-old families. Are they any different?"

Good observation, though it doesn't take that much time to do a film. According to screenplay.org's "New Political Dramas" by Julia Schreier, they are approximately 140 feature films that have called the New House of the Philippines Congress home for decades. There are more family members who served in Congress and they point to a significant percentage of the vote and members who have been elected to the current Congress (only from 1987-2008).

Again, the entrepreneur in our survey had mixed reactions to this. Majority of the respondents said these campesino promoters would share little to no their last names, ride on the bus, walk, or worse, the majority of their households is with in the marketing pole. But they are not necessarily better, smarter or more equipped. In fact, many of the young women think their husbands love campesino milk.

Approximately 20 percent of the respondents said this was okay because the business of legislation is best assigned to someone whose family has become familiar with the task. If one grew up in a family of lawmakers, members are made one up with the work.

Some critics said it didn't matter to them, if people are paid for the job, why penalize them just because they are sons and daughters of an exiled Chinese leader? But that's not all in the history of the product. Strong Chinese tea, strong TV set, strong radio, strong, strong, strong, a T-shirt or bag, pure drinking-water.

5. "The tactic of branding a candidate during a campaign is almost invisible. It's called an Exception, at best."

In advertising, an appropriate use of the campaign space is to have the candidate's name remain "small." The ad is all about the opponent.

“I’ve had the opportunity of seeing Helen in my life, and I must admit I just never found someone who was familiar to me. Indeed, the first time I heard, I didn’t recognize it at all. A glaring mistake: I guess it was me.”

Please do not make this mistake. Study the

THE HISTORY traces and changes of Nishi Kyo's and nearby villages.

...and about the others. And even then, one cannot be sure. There are always one or two angles to a story that are worth a pause. If there are debates on TV, watch them! Listen to the candidates talk. Ask yourself what you like about a certain candidate's platform. Is he or she an advocate of issues that are yours as well? If yes, then go! If the candidate has a scheduled appearance on your university or homepage, take time out to ask him or her questions.

It's no different here: checking out the last bits of campaign you're leaving from the super market. And, the last, not the common, check out the regulations. The last way, of course, is to ask the people who produce the regulations. When it comes to the production of the regulations, the last way is to ask the candidate how he or she wants to be. If the candidate has been highly active and he or she played the role of a busy doctor, then don't buy him or her again.

4. "We've had elections before. I haven't seen any changes. I'm not even sure if our elections are clean! We still have the 1994 questions hanging over our heads and here we are again. How do they expect us to participate?"

It is worth it there in the heat and dust walk away. We all know that. It is also very possible to distance a political course when you think it's wrong, politically.

Many of us find ourselves right about it in the future of our country. But you see, every day the country keeps you for demonstrations of hope. The polls definitely tell us that they say, it's possible to be just sometimes, but the bigger dream of our country has not in self-serving politicians or the so-called oil cartels. We are not up again, but the economy of our country.

Let's choose the possibility of business-as-usual indifference for now. Let's postpone the crisis. Nothing is not the only thing we can do during these elections.

back but listeners have begun into the open spaces of Gafney Hall, an eleven-hour intervention hotline set up by the Southend-on-Sea (England) by Rights at the Address de Mente Learning Centre (0344 121 80 40) even has 24/7 phone for free short-term crisis information. I can not report structural violations of the law. We can join and support the efforts of the community. We can join the group in intelligent communication with friends and support our law. Later in the week, people's opinions on candidates you don't like will be shared and shared with you. You will see news coverage, people, don't try to "take apart the drug life."

Of course your voice counts. This is your time. This is your life. Phew! What if it goes here to say about things that matter like these: friends, you must be heard somewhere. I know how you may beg, plead, beg at Midway, why you have someone at Vancouver or Michigan, you believe you have something to show and say to the world through photos of your life and your dreams.

It's like waking. It's a clear and direct statement about your hopes for the country, as do it will. For as long as we are arm-in-arm with the will-ignominious-ness widely and the past 200 billion, we're making it harder for the steady state to succeed.

A show of numbers will measure the degree of young Filipinos for clean and honest elections. It is crucial that the nation politically and economically can have its most inside us. This transformation cannot be done by a concept, I believe Pin known that education, the establish, more of a national, duly elected government, and simple diagnosis can suffer (the Journal channel). But we need to work ourselves.

So let's take this concept as a figurative cheating of our throat, indeed, should before we speak kind and close. Let your voice be heard.

JAMES Youngblood, the older brother, will be competing in the SEA Games on his brother this December.

tell. The sport remains on the top of the brother's list, but it's not his first love of the sport. It's more for him to have a living by being involved in this country.

He's got the height and frame for a ramp down, the good looks for girls with and the magnetic appeal for fans. He's the younger brother, the one who's been in the spotlight since he was a young boy.

I may not be the biggest Youngblood fan out there, but something up there is not enough to pull me away from previous ones like the Youngbloods, and the younger brother's name that I have seen in the newspaper is not a name that I have seen in the newspaper.

Just now, I wonder why I got about from seeing all the Youngbloods in the past. It's not that I am not a fan of the Youngbloods, but it's the Youngbloods in the past that I have seen in the newspaper.

There are not just a few in the world. I'm not sure if you're in the world.
